From Yesterday's Evening Edition.

ATLANTA, AUGUST 1, 1873.

PERSONAL.—Captain Camp, an old Confederate comrade, is in the city from Jackson county, some ten miles from Jefferson. He reports the crops in fine condition.

Summary of State News.

SAVANNAH.

The young man Antone Gemender, who was reported missing in Thursday's papers has turned up in Charleston. He has not given any explanation of his strange conduct.—Schmitt, the deserted lord of the runaway wife, has got married again. The ceremony was performed Sunday afternoon by justice Smith in a bar room.——The members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church will have a camp meeting at number three on the Atlantic and Gulf railroad, commencing next Friday and ending on the Monday following.—Advertiser and Republican.

The enterprising business men of Duluth pass away the dull hours playing marbles, and in utter disregard of that passage of Holy Scripture which saith "marvel not."

BARNESVILLE.

A party left Barnesville for a big fish last week. The results of their efforts were one eel, two moccasins, one mud cat, three terrapins, and a big drunk.——The Patrons of Husbandry meet at the residence of Captain Stafford, in Monroe country, on August 9th.——Too much rain for cotton is the cry now. Our people would grumble if they were to be hanged.——Last Saturday the residence of Mr. Winn, near this place, was burglariously entered, and all of the family clothing taken. Suspicion rests upon a negro who has been loafing around town for several days.—Patriot.

Two young men heard of the famed beauty of the Dalton girls paid a visit to that happy community last week. The put on a couple of stiff shirt collars and a pair of pump soled boots, and started forth to conquer. They saw two young girls passing down the opposite side of the street, and were so dazzled by their looks that instead of going for them the struck out the other way. When last seen they were twenty miles off and still traveling.

MACON.

A dying man, name unknown, reached Macon Monday evening, on the Macon and Brunswick Road. He left yesterday on the Macon and Augusta Road. His destination is not known, but if it is far off, the Macon doctors say, he will be a corpse before he gets there.—Telegraph and Messenger.

A young gentleman of Macon, who is not in the musical way himself, but considers that he is a good judge of such matters, concluded to serenade his sweetheart the other night. In pursuance of this praiseworthy design he hired a juvenile African and a harmonican for ten cents, and betook himself and his colored assistant to his angel's house During the ensuing half hour the midnight zephyrs bore into the adjacent windows, a beautiful supply of the most intensely doleful music that ever tortured the human ear. At length the second story window opened. The young gentleman struck a pensive attitude, and waited for his sweetheart to return her thanks. She did return them. They were pretty warm and nigh unto two gallons in quantity. Their advent was followed by a confused sound as of footsteps retiring with unwonted rapidity, a peculiar odor as if somebody had boiled a nigger in that neighborhood, and all was still. The young gentleman did not come to business next day. He spent the time in a tub filled with sweet oil and ice, and sent word that he had been struck by lightning.

Colonel Pollard, manager of the Mobile and Montgomery Railroad, has appointed Colonel G. Gordon, superintendent.

An amusing feature of the last day of the Clayton fair was the talking match between about a dozen ladies. George Clayton announced that a premium of $10 was offered to the best talker and the "anger that stirs, and the words that were let loose," on this announcement, was a caution to quiet people. Every one of them got mad. Every one of them began to talk, and the babel of voices there entered was a caution. They all did their batteries, and the fear was something was about to happen. Finally submitted but two and they having to the satisfaction of the judges, the sous announcement was made "time up." his was the occasion of a new departure and each begun the tale of injustice, in being allowed time enough to say what thought, or, in other words, to give them "a piece of her mind." One said she owned the $10 because she was talker a house damaged by fire and furniture broken and destroyed. Another said she talking for a large family consisting of a ranuated husband and numerous chil and that committee was the worst nonsd of any set we ever saw. South Carolina will begin the fiscal year with a deficit of about $700,000. The Treasury is even now empty. The appropriations for the year were $3,400,000, and the receipts so far have only reached $1,600,000. Of the accumulated debt under which the State is staggering, and is practically bankrupt-suits have been entered to throw off seven millions or conversion bonds, issued, it is claimed, without authority of law.

General J. C. Breckenridge, says the Richmond Whig, arrived in the city Saturday morning. This is General Breckinridge's first visit to Richmond since, as the last Secretary of War to the South in Confederacy, he left the city at the sad evacuation of April, 1865. General Breckinridge visited the Capitol Saturday, and noted with interest the changes that had taken place there since he was last in the edifice. The General is still a man of imposing appearance and distingue air, and, although a little grizzled, is still robust, erect, and ruddy.

A Petersburg, Virginia, mechanic has invented a cotton tie which is considered by those who have examined it, the simplest and most durable yet brought before the public. It can be placed on the bale with the tie on the inside next the bale, or on the outside, and when used with the lap on the inside makes the neatest tie on the market. It is in one piece; whereas in the other ties there are buckles or wedges, which are liable to be detached when the bale is opened, and sometimes do serious injury to delicate machinery. It can be made by any blacksmith at one heat of the iron.

McComb, of Wilmington, Del., who, with Tom Scott and Newcomb of Louisville, owns nearly all the railroads in the Southwest, located his repair and other railway shops, some years ago, at a pretty town called Water Valley, Miss. The then village grew apace. Property became valuable and Water Valley promised to become a leading manufacturing town. McComb seeing this, and that he could build a city anywhere, has bought a site and transfers thither his shops and dinner station, and Water Valley, like Holly Springs, their former site, is bathed in tears. People say that after McCord has drawn together 8,000 or 10,000 people at his new place, yclept McComb's city, he will migrate and again make a profit of half a million more or less by buying a plantation at $5 per acre, converting it into a city, and selling at $5,000 per acre.

The Central Railroad and Banking Company.

We have ascertained the facts relative to the reported sale of the bonds of this company. Messrs. James F. Bozeman, of Atlanta; Wm. B. Johnston, of Macon; and J. F. Gilmer, of Savannah, as commissioners therefor, recently negotiated in New York, a sale of one million seven hundred thousand of the first mortgage consolidated bonds of the Central Railroad and Banking Company at satisfactory rates. The proceeds of these bonds are to provide for proposed extensions and more perfect connexions on their lines. The management of this road seems always successful.

Our August Fashion Letter.

We give for our lady readers this morning one of the monthly fashion letters of our popular special correspondent of THE CONSTITUTION, Jennie June. She writes from Saratoga.

She, however, not only writes for the ladies, but in the present letter she tells the gentlemen all about what is fashionable for them to wear.

Those of our "curled darlings," that part their hair and names in the middle, and esteem it of value to know what should be the cut of their jibs, and when and how they should dress, will find valuable information.

We thank our enterprising correspondent for thus furnishing toggery information for our young gallants, and call their attention to that part of her letter.

The way our bachelor editors and attaches have been poring over this part of Jennie June's letter has been a caution. We have scarcely been able to get the manuscript long enough for the printers to put it in type.

Spain Getting Hot.

The news from Spain is getting lively. The war waxes warm. The information that the Carlists are turning church bells into money, and running a Communistic schedule of agrarianism and forced reduction of rents and prices looks serious and earnest.

The thing has certainly got past child's play. Desperate men are at desperate antagonism, and somebody is bound to be hurt.

Plain Talk.

The Grangers are refreshingly plain in their resolutions. There is no machine ring about the following, passed by a farmers' meeting held at Clifford, Ill.:

Resolved, That we believe a thief should be called a thief, without regard to social or political standing, and we characterize the recent salary grab by our Congress and President as no better than a steal.

Nor is there any ambiguity in the following motions inscribed on the banners of the farmers who celebrated Independence Day, at Lanark, in Carroll county, Ill.:

We want and must have honest men to fill public positions.

Salary grabbers, hunt your holes.

Salary of our Congressman, one hundred bushels of corn a day. Poor fellow!

Georgia Paying up in New York.

The lightning tells us that Georgia is making glad the New York financial soul by paying up past due interest on the gold quarterly bonds.

This will carry joy to aching pockets, revive the drooping spirits of discouraged bondholders, hit Clews and his ilk a stunning sockdolager, and bouy up Georgia credit like a healthy sea breeze. Between 700 and 800 thousand dollars has been raised like magic on new Georgia bonds at par by the State Treasurer. Ample funds are on hand to pay every past due bond and every dollar of every past due interest.

So wags the world. It is a long lane that knows no turning. Georgia has been down. She is now up. And by the grace of God, and the spirit in her own stout heart, she will keep up forevermore.

Suspension of the Ku-Klux Prosecutions.

Our telegraphic dispatches give us the correspondence between the South Carolina gentlemen and the Attorney-General in regard to the Ku-Klux and enforcement prosecutions. It will be found of deep interest.

It will be seen that while the government maintains the wisdom and necessity of the Ku-Klux and Enforcement laws, it yet proposes to suspend further prosecutions under said laws except in very aggravated cases. Of course we cannot demur to the terms in which this concession is made. But the new policy will result well. It will be found that a kinder feeling will spring up to the administration, that thus declines to use its power to prosecute.

It will also be found that a good deal of brief but very fantastic authority in small officials will cease.

Let us hope that light is dawning at last permanently.

Hon. Thomas E. Lloyd, of Savannah, Dead.

The telegraph last night brought the intelligence of the death of the Hon. Thomas E. Lloyd, of Savannah, who is appropriately designated in the dispatch as the leading lawyer of that place.

The writer knew Mr. Lloyd most intimately, and learns with pain of his decease in the very meridian of his great legal powers and reputation. The writer read law and practiced for a while with him.

The death of Mr. Lloyd will leave a large gap in the bar of Savannah, and one difficult to be filled. He possessed the finest legal mind we have ever been associated with. He was purely and exclusively a counselor at law. He admitted lead the Savannah bar for years. He was essentially a principle lawyer, though his knowledge of cases was immense. One summer in the vacation he read thirty thousand pages of law reports in the relaxation from active practice.

He possessed the finest qualities of the Southern gentleman.

He represented his county several times in both branches of the General Assembly.

Peace to a good man's remains.

The Georgia Bonds.

Considerable indignation exists among those persons who have been published as creditors for heavy amounts of the defaulting Georgia swindler, H. I. Kimball, whose failure occurred two years ago. Application to several of those mentioned elicited the information that they were either not interested or their interest was for lesser amounts. A member of a leading banking house, who are said to have been creditors for a large sum, stated that he supposed the figures very exaggerated in many of the cases. With respect to his own house, the transaction was one of some years past, and had been liquidated by the sale of securities left as collateral against the loan. Henry Clews & Co., who are mentioned as having lost $1,000,000 by the failure, report that they were only interested to the extent of $100,000, which they claim was amply secured by collaterals.

A. G. Johns, President of the Fulton Bank, Brooklyn, when questioned by a reporter of the Tribune, indignantly denied the statement alleging that they had loaned money to Kimball. It was subsequently learned that through Kimball the Fulton Bank had loaned the State of Georgia $35,000 in bonds issued by the State, to pay the Legislature of 1871 and 1872, which are held to be valid by the State authorities. The report relative to the connection of the Brooklyn Savings Bank and Kimball is also denied. The bank has never loaned Kimball anything, and it has never held a Georgia bond. It is understood that that the collaterals in nearly every instance were the Georgia bonds with which the market was flooded at one time.—New York Tribune.

It is right comical to read of Henry Clews and the Fulton Bank of Brooklyn and these other New York innocents who hold Georgia bonds of the Bullock issue, dubbing H. I. Kimball as a swindler. The fury with which these mild and virtuous gentlemen have turned upon Kimball for his publication of their names as his creditors is very suggestive.

Thereby hangs a most interesting and instructive tale. The milk in this cocoanut is of an exceedingly combustible nature.

One might very naturally wonder why such excessive indignation should be shown over an acknowledgement of indebtedness. Men are not usually displeased that their debtors own up the debts due them.

So unnatural and uncalled-for a fury puts one to thinking as to its motive. In the present instance the matter is not altogether obscure.

By a remarkable coincidence the amounts acknowledged by Mr. Kimball to be due to certain creditors are identical in amount with certain claims of the same creditors against the State of Georgia, based upon Bullock bonds. This looks as if Mr. Kimball was assuming these debts as personal to himself. And if so it may help to throw light upon the perplexities of some of these vexed claims, as well as show up Mr. Kimball in a fairer view.

But why, do we repeat, are these creditors so furious at Mr. Kimball's assumption of these debts? They let him have the money in person. Some were connected with him in his projects.

Can it be that they fear that their claims against the State will be damaged by the establishment of the truth of the revelations of Mr. Kimball's bankrupt petition? It is extraordinarily suggestive that of all the creditors the most blatantly furious and resentfully incensed against Mr. Kimball should be the virtuous Clews, and that luminent Johns of the Brooklyn Fulton Bank. The one has been proven to have been in knowing complicity with the frauds on the State. The other, by his testimony, loaned his money on a paper that absolutely forbade the loan as a State matter, but which he weakly and negligently failed to read.

That the two men above all others who have less legality in their claims than any other claimants should make such a fuss against Mr. Kimball looks tremendously suggestive and makes one very anxious to get Mr. Kimball's legal information for the benefit of the State.

These irate and abusive creditors are undoubtedly alarmed. Their hot haste to repudiate Kimball as a debtor in ominous to a very large degree. The circumstances adds another novel and interesting chapter to the complicated tale of the Georgia-Bullock bonds, and suggests still more interesting mysteries as lying dormant for the public gratification in the future.

If Mr. Kimball pays off these large claims against the State with his bankrupt assets, the State cannot complain. And it looks very unkind in the creditors to resist his doing so, and to be unwilling to let Kimball substitute the State as a creditor.

OUR FASHION LETTER.

Jennie June's August Fashion Contribution for the Lady Readers of The Constitution.

Saratoga and its Duds.

Gentlemen's Toggery Too.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, July 28, 1873.

The Saratoga of to-day is as unlike as possible to the Saratoga of fifteen years ago, and to the superficial observer the change is not an improvement. As a spectacle it is much less brilliant and persons who come as they would go to a menagerie—just to see the show—are apt to go away, grumbling and thinking they have not got their money's worth. The truth is, Saratoga from a social and fashionable point of view, has become more sensible and independent than formerly; it no longer adheres to the tradition; it does very much as it pleases, and it is rather amusing to see fashionable women who profess to hold "women's rights" in such bitter contempt, taking advantage of the public opinion, which its upholders have created, to relieve themselves from many forms of social bondage. In the old times five trunks, of immense size, were a necessity, and ten not unusual for any lady who proposed passing six weeks at this super-fashionable resort. Then full dress dinners were the vogue, and those who remember the coup d' œil of the old United States hotel at the table d' hote, will sympathise somewhat with Mr. Marion (the present owner or lessee) to revive the glories of the four o'clock "tea" dinner when his magnificent structure, the new United States is completed.

But Mr. Marion will make a mistake. We cannot bring back the past. The present is ours to do our best with; but we can no more recall the past than we can anticipate the future. The past belonged to those who had it in possession. The future will belong to those who come after us. We have the present, and the present is—well, mixed. It has not the distinctive features of its own which belonged to a much more crude and imperfect age, and it has not yet reached, from any æsthetic point of view the definite future after which it is unconsciously striving. To use a musical figure, it has got beyond the simple notes of the scale, but it has not reached the symphonies in form, or color, or sense, or taste, or sound.

Excepting the merely external of toilettes, the grouping and measuring of color, Saratoga is more attractive and much less enjoyable than ever. There is a virtue in the air, such as is not found elsewhere. There is perfect freedom in dressing, ladies wearing just what they please throughout the day, or rather whatever they find best adapted to their tastes and pursuits.

There are two or three distinactive styles in fashion represented, what may be called the traditional style, the Paris style, and the American style. But to call the ordinary, utilitarian, independent mode of dress, fashion would be a misnomer. It is the correlative of fashion, but not fashion itself.

The traditional style, as I have termed it, is seen among the Cuban ladies more particularly, and other extreme Southern representatives of a past aristocracy. They still wear hoops, much reduced in size, but still giving an unmistakable fullness to the dress. Their overskirts are short and bunchy, their basques deep, their sleeves wide, their colors high, their trains long and wide; and though they have breakfast toilettes, and elaborate dinner toilettes, and evening toilettes, yet they have none of the useful walking toilettes which the modern American woman wears the whole day long.

The Paris style is also somewhat behind the age—at least the Paris styles which are sent to America. Either the French dressmakers do not know any better or they cannot get over the idea that we are only one remove from barbarians and delight in rude forms and crude ornaments. French styles just arrived from Paris still exhibit panniers, which the graceful exponents of true American taste utterly ignore, or rather have got past long ago. These truest representatives of the incoming future of dressare for the most part young, stylish scions of good American families, whose natural aptitude has been quickened by travel and cultivation and who now only lack the inspiration of genius or ideas, to give us as perfect harmonies of dress as the great masters have given in music. The new tints and shadings are a step in the right direction, but we need artists both men and women, capable of adapting them and tracing their correspondencies.

The American dress as worn at present is simple, restricted in style, subdued in color. The skirt is laid close to the hips and almost as close to the ankles, trailing off moderately without suspicion of hoops and only the faintest trace of tournure. The waist is rather long, high-cut jacket form, with a fraise or pleating instead of a collar, which is high or low according to length of neck. Coat sleeves and hair combed straight up from the raive of the neck and arranged in two simple pleats upon the top of the head, with only a side curl or a light fringe of hair over the forehead make up a tout ensemble almost conventional in its striotness.

This impression is strengthened by the absence of color. Grown out of the premaries—the reds and greens and blues and yellows—the modern women of fashion has not yet grown into the symphonies, the melting of one shade into another. She therefore falls back upon black and gray and brown and white, which are easily made to accord and do not offend her still undeveloped sense of fitness and harmony.

We talk of Art and Taste without knowing the first letter on the alphabet of either. If we had a school or schools for artists (both men and women) something might be done. But alas, our teachers are more ignorant than their pupils, and the progress we achieve is brought about by the natural law of evolution, which requires time to perfect its results.

But to return. This theory accounts for the use of the black and neutral tints which are almost universal. Black silks, black grenadine and black lace, either compose or form part of nearly all toilettes.

Black lace is utilised to a surprising extent. A quantity, choice in style and quality, is the most valuable addition to her wardrobe, which a lady can make at the present time. Long black lace scarfs and black lace fichus, the latter knotted at the sides, are worn, bordered with real thread, chantilly, or guipure lace, worth from three to ten dollars per yard.

Black silk and black grenadine are also of the richest, the former soft, rich, and heavy of fold, the latter wide striped with silk of a satiny texture, but not glossy, and draped with wonderful grace and beauty.

Almost the only way in which colors are used is with black lace or white muslin draped over them. Pale cameo-tinted silks have an exceedingly good effect under a long polonaise of fine black Llama lace, for these are worn so much that no one thinks of going to the expense of thread, although, of course, if thread could be had, and no one suffer, so much the better.

The pale greens and blues, on the contrary, which show so well in the evening, are relieved with white, while lace or white French muslin, almost as fine as crepe lisse, which arranges itself so easily in side pleatings or intersects lace with bucs as exquisite as the lace itself.

A point worthy of being mentioned in connection with the changes that have taken place in fashion is the much longer time for which dresses are made to do duty. Formerly a wife considered de rigeur not to appear in the same dress twice. Now, one or two really elegant dresses are thought sufficient; and not only so, but one carried over from season to season, and rich lace, instead of being trampled under foot as it has been on the street, prized as the possession of a life time.

Public opinion has been so far created upon the subject that the plain walking dress is recognised as the proper street dress for all classes, and the party dress par excellence is reserved exclusively for ceremonious evening occasions. This is a great step in advance, and is doing more for the emancipation of women than the agitation of the right to vote.

Opposite to me at my table in the dining-room at Congress Hall, sat three ladies. Two are young and unmarried, but are each possessed of a million of dollars in their own right, the other is the wife of a millionaire whose house and grounds upon Madison avenue, in New York, are estimated as worth $500,000, and whose income is over one hundred thousand dollars per year. These ladies have worn the same plain black dresses in the morning, and the same almost as plain silk dresses in the evening every day since my arrival. Their hair is coiled or plaited and entirely destitute of ornament, and their neckties are so simple that shop girls in New York would turn up their noses at them.

The distinguishing feature of the attire of a lady, as distinct from that of others, is getting to be its adaptability. Fifteen years ago it was breadth based upon the size of the hoop-skirt; later, it was the length of train; soon, it will be fitness or appropriateness to different functions, pursuits and occupations.

This is fast becoming the case with gentlemen, also.

GENTLEMEN'S FASHIONS.

Eli Perkins, in a note to me, this morning, says: "Gentlemen's fashions in America, as they have long been in Europe, have become conventional and fixed. They no longer change with the whims of tailors; but well-bred gentlemen, with complete wardrobes, have certain suits of clothes for certain occasions, and keep the same or similar suits year after year. The tailors used to dictate low-necked shirts, and then all the coats and collars would have to be cut down in the neck. Then they would institute high-nicked shirts, and collars would go up again. Now, a gentleman with a long or short neck procures a coat and shirt-collar to correspond in height and keeps the same fashion year after year. A long-necked person should wear the high English standing collar, while a short-necked person should wear low Byron collars. The suits which an American, French, English, or German gentleman should have are as follows:

AFTERNOON BUSINESS SUITS.

English Oxford hats, medium height; cut away cost; black, blue or grey waistcoat to match; single or double breasted; pantaloons a shade lighter. If a person is stout he should wear a single breasted coat and waistcoat; if tall, wear double. If plaids or grays are worn, let the suit be complete of one material. The scarf or tie should be of some warm color—some sweet symphony. Wear strong, easy shoes.

AFTERNOON STREET COSTUME.

High dress hat; standing collar; blue, maroon, or parti-colored scarf; Prince Albert frock coat, always buttoned up; drab pantaloons and gloves several shades lighter than the coat; high laced or buttoned shoes.

AFTERNOON RECEPTION WITH LADIES IN BONNETS.

Wear black crush hat which can be carried under the arm; white standing collar; light pearly amber or lilac scarf with gloves to match; Prince Albert frock coat, black and always kept buttoned; light drab pantaloons; calfskin boots.

Full dress evening tollette—Hat left in the dressing room; standing collar, pure white tie, emmaculate open shirt front, plain studs or diamonds, swallow-tailed coat, single-breasted black waistcoat, black trousers, calf skin boots.

Racing suit can be of fancy plaids with striped shirts and collars, fancy hat bands, patent leather shoes, etc.

Gentlemen's jewelry—A gentleman will wear no jewelry which is not necessitated by utility. He may wear collar buttons, studs, cuff buttons, a watch chain, and a seal ring, with which he seals his letters—in no case diamond or pearl rings for mere ornamentation.

Thus an American gentleman, to be always well dressed, needs only three suits of clothes, all of which are toned to the three coats mentioned—the cutaway morning coat, the Prince Albert walking or reception coat, and the full dress evening coat.

It will be seen that there is strict correspondence between the different parts of each of these styles of dress, and it is in their adaptation to each other that the gentleman is seen through them all.

Bring a countryman to Saratoga in the season and he will be very likely to make some such mistake as the following:

Meeting a gentleman in morning dress, he observes the slouch hat and says:

"Come, now, that is sensible. I like that. I'll get one of those hats," and forthwith mounts one. Later he notices a Prince Albert frock coat, and concludes that is the style for him too. He goes to the races, takes a fancy to the "fancy" striped skirts, red neckties, patent leather boots and checked trowsers there displayed, and gets himself up accordingly.

Next day, looking at himself in his strip of a looking glass—slouched hat, frock coat, checked pantaloons, striped shirt, red tie and patent leathers—he throws down his hat in disgust, and says: "Oh, hang it! why can't I look like other folks?"

These are the mistakes that both men and women are constantly making. We might have worn all of these things (except patent leathers—no gentleman wears patent leathers) at the proper time and with the proper occasions. But if a gentleman wears a check or an infinitesimal stripe he wears a suit of it, and only then for morning or business dress or upon a race course; he does not venture pattern trowsers and black except at the wreck of his reputation.

HOW SARATOGA LOOKS.

Saratoga was never more lovely than now. The weather has not been too warm for enjoyment, yet it has been sufficiently so to admit of doing out of doors after the manner of watering places. The races have greatly increased the number of visitors and crowded the hotels which previously were not filled to their utmost capacity.

A great many cottages and handsome private residences have been built in or near Saratoga recently and the country for four miles around is being rapidly bought up for this purpose, so that its summer population is by no means confined, as formerly, to the boarders at the hotels and private houses. The entire neighborhood is full of springs and it is said to be possible for every family to have one of their own if they will only dig for it.

The Geyser and Hathorn are now the popular wells, both possessing remarkable medicinal qualities. The hotels have increased their size, and are now probably as perfect in arrangement, method, cuisine and appointment as any in the world. The Union has been newly frescoed, fitted with elegant chandeliers and other furnishings since it came into the possession of Mr. A. T. Stewart; but he is not yet satisfied, and intends, it is said, pulling down the entire front and rebuilding it like Congress Hall. The new Grand is very imposing on the outside and richly appointed within.

Madame Le Vert gave a reading the other night, which drew all the hotel people, and the town is full of them. It was a very successful and brilliant affair, the lady having hosts of friends who gladly listen to her interesting remeniscences of the famous places she has visited and the famous people she has known.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WILLIAMS' LETTER.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, WASHINGTON, July 30, 1873.

Messrs. Porter, Kershaw and Sims, Washington, D. C.:

GENTS—Your letter of yesterday, intended to elicit from me a public expression of the policy of the government in relation to the prosecutions and prisoners under the enforcement acts, is received.

I have to say in answer, as indicated in his conversation with you, the President has communicated to me what I have heretofore understood to be his wish—that the persons accused and convicted of offenses under said acts should be treated with as much leniency as possible without prejudice to the ends for which they were passed.

It must, however, be distinctly understood that this action by the government is not prompted by any doubt as to the necessity or validity of such acts, or of the convictions and duties of the convictions already had, but is prompted only by a desire to conciliate and unite all our people, and that those who have been, through said convictions, been almost, if not altogether, broken up, and that those who were concerned in or sympathized with them have come to see the folly, wickedness and danger of such organizations.

You have been pleased to say to me, and similar assurances have been given by others, seeking the same object, that executive clemency at this time in the Ku-Klux cases would tend to remove many causes of uneasiness and irritation now existing, and conduce generally to the public peace and tranquility, and the proposed action is taken in reference to such cases with the full expectation that these assurances will be verified.

You are informed that the prosecutions now pending in the courts for violations of the Enforcement Acts will be suspended or discontinued, and instructions to that effect have already been given to the several District Attorneys. But there may be exceptional cases of great aggravation, where the government will assist in conviction and punishment. There are, however, but few of such cases now within my knowledge. Persons who have absented themselves on account of their complicity or supposed complicity in the Ku-Klux offenses, are at liberty to return, and unless their crimes bring them within the above named exceptional cases, they will not be prosecuted.

Many of those sentenced to imprisonment for such offences have been already pardoned, and the cases of the others are under consideration and will probably be disposed of in like manner, keeping in view the proper relation between their punishment and nature of their guilt.

To avoid any misconstruction of these proceedings, it is, perhaps, necessary for me to say that all conspiracies and outrages in violation of said acts hereafter committed will be prosecuted with all possible energy and vigor, and it is to be understood that the Government does not intend to abandon said acts, but induce if possible, a willing obedience to their reasonabl requirements. Substantially they are intended to protect the citizens of the United States in the possession of their political and civil rights guaranteed to them by the late amendments to the Constitution, and the President, whose duty it is to see that the laws are faithfully executed, would be recreant to that duty if he did not so administer the government as to afford to all citizens the equal protection of its laws. I have added these suggestions to the information for which you ask with a sincere hope that by the exercise of a mutual recognition of each others rights by all classes of people. No further necessity will arise for their protection and enforcement under said acts through the action of the general government. Very respectfully,

GEO. H. WILLIAMS, Attorney General.

LETTER OF THE SOUTH CAROLINIANS.

WASHINGTON, July 30, 1873.

Hon. George H. Williams, Attorney-General:

SIR—After our conference with you, we proceeded to Long Branch and were promptly succeeded an interview with President Grant, which was in all respects cordial and satisfactory.

The President expressed views of clemency similar to those previously expressed by you, and said he would address you a note defining the present policy of the government in relation to the prosecutions of prisoners under the Enforcement Act. We beg to renew the suggestion already made that the progress of the government in the premises be made public, so all concerned particularly, may not have authentic information from the proper official source by which they may be able to govern themselves. Such official announcement will, in our opinion, produce a great moral effect.

We are, with great respect, your obedient servants,

THE HOP AT THE KIMBALL HOUSE.—Last evening, Colonel Nichols, the courteous proprietor of the Kimball House, inaugurated the first of a series of hops which, we understand, are to be given weekly. As this was the first affair of the kind, of the season, it was not quite as widely known as it should have been, and the attendance was, consequently, somewhat smaller than had been anticipated. Still as many as the ball room could handle to make the dancing a complete success. Everybody enjoyed themselves to the utmost, and much of the evening's success was owing to the indefatigable exertions of Col. Nichols, who was everywhere at all times seeing that his guests were having a pleasant time. At eleven o'clock the happy crowd dispersed to their various homes, and will wait with eager expectation the announcement of the second hop.

"Farewell to Cohuttee's high peak in the dale;

Farewell to the green spot where my kindred sleep;
By them the willow alone must weep."

This quotation may be incorrect, but it is sufficiently clear to identify the piece of poetry. C.

The Grand Lodge Knights of Jericho.

ATHENS, GA., July 30, 1873.

The Grand Lodge Knights of Jericho, State of Georgia, assembled at Odd Fellows' Hall to-day at 10 o'clock, A.M.

LODGES IN NEXT DISTRICT.

I learn that steps were taken to organize a Lodge in every town, village and hamlet in the State, and to extend the work into North and South Carolina and Tennessee.

The meeting was a very harmonious one, and will long be remembered by every one present as the most pleasant and delightful. The Lodge adjourned, this afternoon, to meet the first Wednesday in September, 1874.

RIGHT REVEREND BISHOP GROSS ON CHARITY.

Conclusion of the Lecture.

[CONCLUDED FROM CONSTITUTION, JULY 31ST.]

Christ tells us that we are to see Jesus Christ in all. Then it is our Lord himself tells us that whatsoever do to the least of these, my little ones, ye unto me. Paul tells us whatsoever we do to

WE DO TO CHRIST,

that the man whose pain we alleviate, is not this sick alone, but it is our blessed Savior we waited; That the poor little waif we take up from the street and carry away, is the infant Jesus, that manger as to be born in a stable; that we waited him. Oh! what a motive to Christianity. Had we present the night that Christ was born, and hastened into that poor bleak stable and seen that little infant, whose bed was the harsh whose cradle was the crib, who we expose to the cold, oh! then how happy we have been, what an honor we would have felt have taken him in our arms and carried him home—to have clothed and warmed him, and had it wanted nothing. That would have been to our hearts. But christianity tells us that items of our poor we can do this act of charity to Christ. The Divine Judge tells us, after deny the day of judgment with that grandeur of last of which he alone was the master, he tells it that he

WAS THERE ETERNAL LIFE,

because I poor and ye ministered unto me, I was in pain ye visited me, I was a stranger and ye took it, was sick and ye comforted me. Then shall the say to the great King and say, "When Lord, didst thee poor and sick, and a stranger, and in and came and ministered to thee?" and shall the Judge say, "Inasmuch as ye did this to the least of my little ones, you have done me!" Oh! that grand heart! Not so much turd, not so much the golden crown, that is to reward of charity beyond the grave, not so much honors there as the fact that we can

that we can him. Oh! the glorious thought! That will our hearts to despise this world's praise, amanity be done in secret, that it may be done to Christ. Where is the heart that does not feel that we seen our blessed Lord, as he dragged the upon his bleeding shoulders, had we seen him down, crushed beneath its fearful weight, oh! what joy would we have gone to lift that infamy from his bleeding shoulders, and have the blood from his face and from his wounds. Ofriends, that pleasure and that honor is given us for we see fellow-mortal that is sick and we visit, and console him, and aid him. Oh! it is to Christ sick, poor and infirm, we do that charity who took that poor body from the cross, and washed its wounds, and closed its poor dead eyes, and to if decent burial. Oh! we envy those who the lot to give to Jesus Christ that proof of love of their devotion to him. Envy them not, Christianity, you have Christ all around you do you wish to see Christ naked? Se naked here, and the clothing you put upon naked limbs you put upon the limbs of Jesus. wish to pour oil and balm into his wounds, append the cooling drink to his parched lips. You Christ all around you—the sick, the poor, the and the abandoned. Do this to these and you Jesus Christ. Oh! I do not wonder then that ages we find those heroes and heroines of charity having all idea of self, giving up their very and leaving their houses, kindred and friends behind, go to serve the poor in hospitals, on field, everywhere, ministering Christ in the form of the poor, the sick and abandoned one of this world.

Which one

ANGELS OF CHARITY,

I remember of reading a story which illustrates this very. Perhaps you have heard it before. Perhaps, since, it will bear repetition. In one of the hood of the North, that was attended to by those ladies we no well know in your own community—Sisters of charity—wounded for high unto death. He had been brought the wilds, and had never seen a sister of charity wounded. Now, he found that he would recover. The sister of charity spoke him about preparing for death, for the next world. His education had been said, and he did not know much of these things and there came a priest through the hospital, noticing that he was very low, said to him, "My w, I do not think that you will recover." "said the soldier, "I think myself that I will not rer." "Well, then, "said the priest, "if you you know that you have to appear blood, and you ought to prepare to meet him," answered the various acts that are necessary, that may go forth from this world to be judged in. The soldier muttered that he did not know, and around for

SEEN LAY A POOR SOLDIER,

of the Sis Charity. "What you say," said he, "may be true, I don't know much about all these things, but all that gal there, in the white bonnet. [Laughter] that gal in the white bonnet is not an angel, there ain't no angels, but whatever she says for me, I will do."

See the sense of charity sacrificing self going all ing ministering to the sick, pouring oil into the its wounds of the maimed, and bringing consolation, the desolate and weary. Oh, what a lesson is to take into our hearts. The priests may spasmgels and preach about the virtues of Christianit charity, oh! charity, my friends, it it is, that are sermons that are the most eloquent and the standerstood by all.

Now, my beloved friends, I will detain you no longer thank you for your kind attention this evening. I conclude with the hope and prayer that charity, grand, glorious charity may be of all men. That strife, that malice, that hatred may be shed before the glorious dawn of the sun of charity as the foul birds of the night and vicious birds away in their nooks and lairs, as the brighter day dawns in the morning. Love charity, bi friends. May its light dawn over all our hearts in its glorious course, even as the sun increasing in its strength this difference, however, that as the sun knowledge, and must be buried in the gloom of night, my charity never decline—never know the nights setting. Oh! the charity that is enkindled in world! May it light the way to that beautiful where all our hearts may be united in everlasting infinite love. (Loud applause)

ID! GOLD! GOLD!

Big Process in Atlanta.

On yesterday our reporter had the pleasure of visiting Fortembler's foundry for the purpose of looking into the milling which he had been informed was being on at that place. At the east end of the shop found a she shed been erected temporarily, under had been put up the various machinery red in the process. Unluckily there was no one on at the time, and therefore he was unable to see all in full operation, but through the kindness Mr. Wm. Vaughn, a carpenter, who was at work and the proprietor of the mill, Mr Bullock, (nnection with R. B.,) and his son, together with other gentleman whose name we did not know, he explained to him the different parts of the mach, and was also given an insight into the manner of working. The first thing to which our attention directed was what is called the

CRUSHING PAN.

This consi of a large circular tub 12 inches deep, some et in diameter, the centre of which was so arra as to allow its revolution on an upright axle was separated from the inside rim of the tub, in the space made by the inside and outside of the past, two heavy iron wheels revolved, Peter made in order not to allow any of the particles which was being ground to remain on their sur One of these wheels revolved much more rapidly than the other, though they evidently seemed to ranged on the same horizontal axis; this was explished by the arrangement of the cogs.

THE ORE OR ROCKS

containing gold having been broken into the proper size of a man's fist, by means of an instrument that purpose, working somewhat on the principle of the "bucker" used in rolling mills are thrown in, crushing pan and are ground into the finest pow Water, which comes from a tank by means of a large force pump, continually flows into the pan, by the wheels in grinding the particles into pow or rather mush, and then through a siphon, wash erything over and into the

AMALGAMATING TUB.

To obtain a p idea of the amalgamating tub it is necessary for to see it themselves. We do not propose to give a oroughly correct description of it, but only a gener. It is made something after the style of Quaker pan, that instead of the wheels rolling on the bottom surface, it has what is called rollers. Three of which are near the inner side, three near the outer side of the tub. Those near ter side are about twice as large as the other, which operation they turn vertically in opposite direc, and create quite a commotion with the water, articles and dust that comes from the crushing pan. The amalgamating tub quicksilver is poured, this silver collects all the gold dust and separates it the clay and powdered stone, causing it to be gathered. The powdered stone, clay, etc., is carried by a siphon similar to the one spoken of above from

THE WASHER.

This is a small trough, working from side to side, fice of which is fitted with wooden boards, on the Whether pan, chickens or Paris tells us whatsoever we do to gold dust that may have escaped from the amalgamating tub is saved in the washer. The weight of the gold, so greatly predominating over any other substance in it, c nses it to sink to the bottom and is prevented from flowing out by small wood dams on the bottom. The wa er and sand passing out through an aperture into a large trough or basin, where the sand remains. The water is taken up by pipe into the tank from which it first started.

The above is a hurried description, what is particular claims the special accuracy, but quite enough to show to our readers how we are not altogether neglecting to develope the mineral wealth of Georgia.

We will, at some future day, give a more minute description of the mill and the workings, as well as follow the precious metal into the and being it out refined, which we will say can be done in this city.

The question suggested where is the ore to come from, is pertinently answered, that the hills of the State are filled with the precious object. The mine from which ore has already been used in the above washing by the mill above described, produced a nugget, almost free from alloy, weighing eight pennyweights, is situated near

GRANTVILLE, IN MERIWETHER COUNTY,

Mr. Bullock, an old miner, who has given his entire attention to the subject, and has visited almost every mine in America, says that this is one of the richest that he has ever seen, and he doubts not that the yield will be abundant. He stated it as a fact that ore found in Georgia surpasses that which has been taken from the Western mines, in purity. Add to this the salubrity of the climate, the healthiness of our State, the abundance of labor, and the culture and morality of our people, the advantages we possess will, ere long, make Georgia rank first among the States.

BALLOONS

A Balloon For the Times.

Invented by a Constitution Correspondent.

The balloon subject seems to be engrossing public attention to a large degree.

Mr. R. P. Hinds sends us the drawing of a balloon system which, he suggests, will obviate the cardinal objection to this mode of navigation that one cannot ascend or descend at will.

He proposes a balloon in a balloon, connected with each other by tubes and valves, and an air pump. To ascend the ornament would pump the gas from the inner to the outer balloon. To descend he would pump the gas in the inner balloon, and letting it out from the main and outer balloon. He could thus control his movement, letting off or putting on gas as he wished in his main balloon.

The inner balloon is made stronger to hold the compressed gas.

THE COURTS.

The Proceedings of the Justice's Courts for Yesterday—Cheating and Swindling—Bastardy Cases—The Other Courts Quiet.

The Justices' Courts.

It was exceedingly difficult yesterday to obtain the whereabouts of the different officers of the Courts. Business was transacted at the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court, at the Commissioner's Court. The day was very dull in all legal circles, except the Justices' Courts. Each of these tribunals had some criminal business before it.

Mr. Powell Owens sued out a warrant before Justice Butt against a well known Peachtree street merchant, whose name we refrain from mentioning, charging him with fornication and adultery.

The other person named in the warrant, the defendant claims as his wife, and says that he has been living with her for several years. This marriage the prosecutor denies, and says that the defendant has a wife living in another State. The defendants appeared before Justice Butt, waived a hearing by the advice of their counsel, and gave a bond each for their appearance before the Superior Court.

Mr. Ellis represents the State in this case, and Messrs. Gartrell & Stephens the defense.

Justice Munday spent a portion of yesterday morning investigating a possessory warrant case between two negro girls, Masouri Hood and Louisa Moore. Miss Louisa charges that Louisa fraudulently and without lawful authority took possession of a small valise containing one dress, a merino sack and several unmentionable articles of feminine apparel, and had the same in her possession, refusing to give them up. After inquiring into the facts the Court turned over the property to the plaintiff and discharged the defendant minus the costs. There were no attorneys employed in this case.

Yesterday afternoon Justice Hammond issued his warrant for the arrest of Mr. P. A. Farrington for cheating and swindling. The warrant was sued out by Messrs. Carley, Duck & Co. It seems that on the 17th day of June, the defendant bought of the prosecutors two large window lights, and promised to pay for them upon delivery. He placed the lights in his house, thus making them a part of the realty, and putting them out of the reach of an attachment, and failed to pay the bill. The prosecutors then determined to have him arrested. The case will be heard this morning at nine o'clock.

Station House Report.

The police made only four arrests yesterday. They were all for disorderly conduct and drunkenness. The prisoners were nearly all colored.

'ON CHANGE.—'Change was slimly attended yesterday, no doubt owing to the press of business that engaged the merchants at their stores, or possibly the lack of matters of importance to demand their attention before the board. Nothing was done, save the correction of the market report in reference to corn, reducing it to 80@87½ from 83, which had been inaccurately reported.

Mr. Wm. Garrett, of G. & Bros., presided, and Mr. John Stevens, of Steven & Flynn, acted as Secretary.

The Duke of Northumberland's Residence.

St. Louis Republican London Letter.

A frowning front of stone, five stories high, has the appearance of being the house, but it's only the shell, a sort of stone fence. Passing a spided gateway, you are in a courtyard 40 feet deep and the house is 900 feet long and old and gray. The servants about the place are thicker than leaves in the fall, and specially fat.

They must keep a dozen butlers who weigh 300 pounds apiece, and a lot of footmen, and one of whom could go as a side show. Out to the awning-covered porch comes one of the beef-eaters, his hair whitewashed with something looking like lard and lime. He shouts, "Kerrige ur me lud!" one of the fat herd outside echoes the cry, and from some shady nook in the court up rumbles the "kerrige."

Down the steps backward tumbles one of the 300-pounders, another and still another. One opens the door of the "kerrige," a second gives the driver his orders, and the third is highly ornamented but entirely useless, and a snuffy little old man, with neckkerchief awry and seedy hat and trembling hands in worn old black gloves, gets in the team and is bowled through the gate, while all the big beef-eaters reverently bow. This is "his lu'ship," and he's one type of "lu'ship."

The other is younger, has a flower in his button-hole and wears lavender kids, parts his hair in the middle, has one eye preternaturally large from blocking up the other with an eye-glass, "wides in Wotton wow" from 11 till 1, goes to the club and dawdles in the window till 6, dines and wines till 10 or 11, and that is found with some Mabel Grey dancing in the Argyle rooms till all hours of the morning—an example set by the Prince of Wales and religiously followed by the bulk of the aristocracy.

The Knoxville Press and Herald of the 29th says it is a difficult matter to arrive at a definite conclusion in regard to the prevalence of the cholera in East Tennessee, nor can the most cautious prediction be marked by the least degree of accuracy. Un more than one occasion have we chronicled the subsidence of the disease, but before our paper had hardly reached our readers, the intelligence of its outbreak at other points, contradicted our report. When Greeneville began to show signs of restoration to health, our people indulged in high hopes, which alas! were soon blighted by the sad news from Jonesboro, which will be found in our local columns this morning. Let us therefore be ever watchful and prudent, for who knows but what it may yet curse our city.

It is reported in Europe that our distinguished fellow-citizen George Francis Train, the coming Dictator, has either bought or is negotiating for a summer residence on Lake Leman. The price to be paid for the property, which includes a steam yacht on the lake, is 300,000 francs, or $40,000.

THE [illegible] ARE THE BEST.—All travelers who have tested the value of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as an acclimating preparation and as a means of avoiding the painful and dangerous disorders of the bowels and the liver, which accrue from a change of water or unwholesome vapors, refer to it with enthusiasm as an unequaled preventive medicine. Wherever the atmospheric conditions are unfavorable to health and the water impure, this powerful tonic is indispensable alike to the settler and transient sojourner. There was a time when raw brandy or whisky was almost universally used to qualify the waters of the western rivers, and the wells, etc., of the low-lying districts of the South. Now, the liquors of commerce have been generally discarded by travelers and residents in these regions, and Hostetter's Bitters substituted in their stead. At this season when the sun is near the zenith and the heat oppressive, two or three doses of the Bitters daily will have a salutary effect on the appetite, the digestion and the spirits.

THE DAILY CONSTITUTION

IN THE PAST.

Gl. Benton's Conceit—Speeches and Proof-reading—Ashe, Venable, Stanley and others as Penmen.

From the Richmond Dispatch.]

Mr. Benton opposed the "omnibus bill," as it was called. He and Foote were deadly enemies. Old Tom was as vain as a peacock, but a very great man for all that. He styled himself "Mr. Benton," as if there were no other Benton on the face of the earth. Every one of his speeches, when he published them, was entitled simply "Speech of Mr. Benton, of Missouri," &c. His little notes that he used to send the proof-readers were signed, the style nobility, "Benton." And he was as careful in punctuating them and his speeches as if he had been a proof-reader himself. We saw him one day whilst the omnibus bill was pending, and when he had just finished delivering one of his unanswerable speeches against it, and heard him tell what he had done. "I punctured Mr. Clay here [pointing first to one and then to another part of his own breast] and I punctured him there, and I had him down, when his Foote-man came to his assistance." He said "Foote-man" with a scornful emphasis; for he hated it he did not despise Foote.

But Foote and Jeff. Davis made more speeches on the compromise measures than any other ten Senators, the one being for and the other opposed to them. These were all most carefully read in the proof sheets, each of course, reading his own, and the two making more changes than all the other senators put together made in theirs, and at an expense to somebody (not to them) of many hundreds of dollars for the single session. Foote would sit up all night rather than miss reading proof sheets. So would Seward. General Cass was very particular as to his speeches, but if important he wrote them out in advance and put them into the hands of the printer before they were delivered. And this reminds us that he wrote such a bad hand that he could not always read it himself. We once saw him try in vain to read a page of his own manuscript. In the kindness of his heart he had gone down to John C. Rives office, to read each page of an important speech to the printer who had it in hand, and one page coming up out of order he was completed stopped. "Bring me the page that comes before it," he said; and having got that, he read on without difficulty. When he got to the door he offered to the person who accompanied him, and whose business it was to give out the speeches to the printers, either a five-dollar or a two-dollar-and-a-half gold piece to treat the boys. These great compromise measures were filling the country with their merits and demerits, but Gen. Cass never forgot his own kindness of heart.

Speaking of bad manuscript, James Brooks, of New York, and Edward Stanley and W. R. Ashe, wrote the worst hand that disgraced the House of Representatives of 1860. Andrew Johnson's was the manuscript of an uneducated man, but it was easily read. Stephens of Georgia, wrote a passable hand. Humphrey Marshall's penmanship was as good as a book-keeper's. Ashe used to say that when he wrote home to his wife she had to send to the nearest town to get a printer to come and read the letter to her. Venable, of North Carolina, used to write a rather illegible but very uniform hand. He was a warm Southern man, yet a great favorite with the members. Old J. C. Rives was nearly always telling something that he had said to "Venable," or Venable had said to him.

The Southern Senators and representatives used to pay liberally the negro that carried proof-sheets to them. Seward gave six and a quarter cents. John Butler and Senator Mason gave both money and as much of the best liquor as the porter chose to drink.

Let us stop here. We do not wish to be as prolix as Foote.

DR. TUTT'S VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS.

The startling drawback on nearly all medicinal agents has ever been that in their process of purgation and purification they have also debilitated the system. To obviate this difficulty physicians have long sought for the agent that would

PURGE, PURIFY AND STRENGTHEN

At one and the same time.

Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which full realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved. The important desideratum is

Dr. Tutt's Vegetable Liver Pill.

Which purify the blood and remove all corrupt humors and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but on the contrary tones the stomach, and invigorates the body during the progress of their operation. They unite the heretofore irreconcilable qualities of a STRENGTHENING FUGATIVE and PURIFYING TONIC.

Dr. Tutt's Pills are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of disease, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their good effects. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation; they produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival

Price 25 cents a box. Sold by all Druggists.

Is the Most Powerful Cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.

It is specially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfection of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, Scrofula, etc., etc.

When weakness is engrafted from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a Tonic to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.

Dr. Calhoun's Liver Pills.

I AM engaged by the Manufacturer of the Celebrated Family Medicine, known as the Calhoun Liver and Anti-Bilious Pills, and under the supervision and assistance of Dr. Calhoun himself, this Pill has been in use for the last thirty-five years, and has taken precedence over all other Liver Pills. Preparations of all the above name. Thousands would certify to their great value if necessary. One fact should supersede any amount of certificates, and that fact is this: Dr. Calhoun has been physician to the Fulton County Prison for over seven years, where the number of prisoners ranged from 60 to 70, hearing under all the diseases incident to this climate. With but few exceptions, they have all been treated with this Pill, and astonishing to say, during these long periods, not a solitary death occurred under his treatment. This fact is worth any amount of testimonials.

I am now prepared to fill orders from Druggists, Merchants and others, and can assure you shall receive prompt attention. There is no type of FEVER, DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, RHEUMATISM, CHOLERA MORBUS, BILLIOUSNESS and SICK HEADACHE, or other disease of a Southern climate, but yields readily to this preparation.
